THE HEADLINE

You had another profitable month — $25,600 of net income on $218,400 of revenue (11.7% net margin), right in line with your six-month trend. Profit is not the problem. Timing is. Our 13-week forecast shows cash dropping to about $1,100 the week of October 6 — well below the $25,000 you want in the account to run comfortably. This is fixable, and you have roughly six weeks of runway to act.

WHY CASH GETS TIGHT (EVEN THOUGH YOU'RE PROFITABLE)

Three things land close together: (1) The Hillcrest final draw ($96,000) slipped — expected the week of Sep 8, now tracking to Oct 13, five weeks later. (2) Q3 estimated taxes ($18,000) are due Sep 15. (3) The Maple Grove material order ($52,000) hits Sep 8. Individually, none of these is a problem. Stacked in the same four weeks — while your big receivable is late — they drain the account faster than collections refill it. Cash stays under your $25k minimum from the week of Sep 15 through Oct 6.

WHAT WE'D DO ABOUT IT — THREE OPTIONS

A. Pull Hillcrest forward: offer a 1% early-payment discount ($960) to release the $96,000 draw in September instead of October. Highest-leverage move. B. Push the big outflows past the tax date: ask Maple Grove for net-45 terms on the $52,000 order, and pause owner draws for three weeks (frees ~$12,000). C. Put a safety net in place now: open a $50,000 line of credit while your numbers look strong — banks approve credit when you don't need it, not when you do.

ONE THING TO WATCH

Days Sales Outstanding crept to 48 days, up from 41. Your final draws are being paid slowly — that's the same pattern that created this squeeze. Tightening billing the day a milestone completes (rather than at month-end) would pull cash in about a week sooner across every project and prevent the next crunch before it starts.

BOTTOM LINE

Strong operating month, one avoidable cash pinch on the horizon. Take option A plus a small piece of B and you sail through October above your minimum. Let's lock the plan on this month's strategy call.
